Mr. Trump has gone further than any president in the postwar era in attacking the media, said Rick Hess, director of the Center for the Study of Democracy at The Brookings Institution in Washington. He cited a particular report in December in which Mr. Trump said journalists should be “tried for treason” for their “fake news” and “disgusting coverage of our country.” Other presidents have occasionally criticized the media. For example, Richard M. Nixon expressed a concern that the media had too much “access” to government and that reporters could not be trusted. President Gerald R. Ford lambasted the news media in his inaugural address as “the owners of the media,” and some conservatives regularly complain about the media’s coverage of them and their policies. But presidents have seldom spoken in such blunt terms. They have rarely gone so far as to call the news media “the enemy of the American people.” The last time a president used the term “enemy of the people” was in April 1933, when Franklin D. Roosevelt called Wall
